QUALITY, REPUTATION, AND GEOGRAPHICAL LINK
Kapeng Barako produced in Lipa City, Batangas is characterized by its distinctively bold, strong flavor profile with a sharp, pungent aroma and notably higher caffeine content compared to Arabica varieties. These qualities are essentially attributable to the following geographical and human factors: Geographical factors: The volcanic soil composition of Batangas, moderate elevation, tropical climate with distinct wet and dry seasons, and the unique microclimate of Lipa City create growing conditions that are ideal for Coffea liberica cultivation — producing beans with larger-than-average size and the Barako's signature flavor intensity. Human factors: Generations of Batangueño coffee farmers have developed and preserved traditional cultivation and processing methods specific to the Barako variety, including selective hand-picking, sun-drying, and traditional hulling practices passed down since the 19th century — as recognized in historical Philippine agricultural records.
